WAGES AND THE TARIFF

The average wage-earner is somewhat at a loss to understand how the protective tariff is of any benefit to him. How, in other words, does the tariff protect the wage earner?

Recently the national industrial conference board of New York completed a comparative study based on examination of conditions in eight major industries. This survey discloses that 50 per cent more horsepower to each wage earner enables an American manufacturer to turn out from two and a half to three times as much in products to the wage earner.

The difference accounts, in a very large measure, for the higher wages and living standards in the United States, the survey concludes.

In the British steel mills, where 9.15 horsepower to the worker is employed, production stands at $975 per worker. In the United States, where the steel mill worker is backed by 12.85 horsepower, production per worker amounts to $3,059. The contrast in automotive and electrical industries in the two countries is equally impressive. In cotton and woolen goods and in boots and shoes, the advantage to the American establishment in this particular is less pronounced, but nonetheless is a factor of considerable importance.

Wherefore it may be concluded that American concerns can pay higher wages and still compete successfully with other countries less advanced in the use of agricultural machinery, so long as the actual difference between total cost of production at home and abroad is compensated by an adequate productive tariff.

It will be fortunate for the United States if this advantage can be maintained. In the industries where hand labor is a large factor and machine processing a minor one, an enormous advantage lies with the foreign competitor, and in that case, particularly, only a substantial protective duty can enable the American manufacturer to have a fair chance in his own home market.

REDISCOVERING ALASKA

Discovery of a unique semi-glacial formation on the slopes of Pavlov volcano has been reported to the National Geographic Society by Professor Thomas A. Jaggar, noted volcanologist, who has led an expedition to the Alaskan peninsula. This expedition, as was noted in these columns some time ago, primarily is for the study of volcanic phenomena in which the Alaskan peninsula and the neighboring Aleutian islands are rich.

However, it is reported that while crossing the tundra and foothill country preparatory to scaling the active and dormant volcanoes, scientific members of the party have made a study of natural phenomena in general.

The peculiar icy formation on the slopes of Pavlov is termed by Professor Jaggar "an ice jumble." It is almost, but not quite, a glacier. Explosive eruptions have dumped debris into the area for years, and this has been frozen together. The materials consist of ice, gravel, boulders, bombs, pumice, ash and sand in a vast hummocky sea of rubble. Four streams flow from the front of this near-glacier. Nearby and above, Pavlov volcano fumes constantly from its symmetrical cone, an American Fujiyama.

During the climb of one volcano the party bagged for museum purposes a huge Kodiak bear, which measures 13 feet from paw to paw, diagonally. These are the largest bears known.

What Others Say

COME-BACK OF VENIZELIS
In view of his wide renown as a statesman, the electoral victory won by Premier Eleutherios Venizelos of Greece, becomes an event of international interest. This does not mean that the Venizelist party obtained its triumph at the polls on any issue of strictly international significance.

For years, ever since Venizelos during the war engaged in combat with the dynasty, the outstanding problem in Greek politics has been that of the future constitutional system of the country. After the fortunes of the battle between republicanism and royalism have so long hung in the balance, it is impossible to predict anything as to the permanency or otherwise of the latest Venizelist success. But it may safely be said that the size of the premier's majority over the royalists indicates his almost complete return to popularity. Only two years ago, upon his re-entry into politics after a self-imposed exile, the chances of anything like as full a come-back seemed meager indeed.

Even today, back as he is in the saddle at Athens, with a strong parliamentary support to count upon, Venizelos seems undecided in his attitude toward the constitutional question. Presumably he still entertains some of his earlier doubts and misgivings as to whether his country is ripe for republican self-government. In the bitter days of his struggle with King Constantine, it must be remembered, Venizelos did not fight monarchy as an institution. He fought Constantine as a man standing in the way of a military alliance with Greece with the western powers.

It will be interesting to see whether now, with a strengthened grip on the destinies of his country, Venizelos will throw his prestige and influence to republicanism or advocate a compromise with monarchy. —Detroit Free Press.

VISCOUNT HALDANE

For no just or adequate reason Viscount Haldane of Cloan was generally hated by his fellow-countrymen during the years of the late war. Haldane was an intense admirer of Germany and of all things German.

"Germany," said Lord Haldane, "is my spiritual home." Yet with all this intense affection for Germany there is no proof that he ever wavered in his loyalty to his own land.

Indeed, it was in considerable measure due to Haldane's work as secretary of state for war that the British army was reorganized and made more effective for the conflict with Germany. A few months after the outbreak of the war he was forced out of office because of his Germanophile utterances.

Perhaps the greatest offense of the late statesman in the eyes of many Englishmen was his forsaking of the Liberal party in 1924 and his acceptance of a post in the Labor government of Ramsay MacDonald. Men who fought in the war felt that this elevation of the "pro-German" was MacDonald's greatest mistake and of all the MacDonald coterie Haldane was subjected to the most vitriolic attacks.

It was probably a grievous blunder for Haldane to return to public life. It stirred old animosities which were in the way of being forgotten.

If Haldane was as pro-German as his enemies have always declared he was academically, sentimentally or theoretically pro-German. Actually he was pro-British. The charge that he was a "defeatist" during the actual period of the war has never been substantiated. What he did and said before and after the actual period of the war is of minor consequence. —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, Aug. 29.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE.

ALTHOUGH this will be a day of initiative and enterprise according to certain inimical influences, there will be positions of hazard and seething conditions calling for prudent management and business acumen in order to avoid the shoals. The money must be wisely handled and a state of turmoil due to the mutual aspect between Mars and Saturn, two major malefics, should be treated with equanimity. There may be some delays and a sudden change. Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year chilling for wise management. It will be an active year, with the energies under high stimulus. But money should be handled prudently and tumultuous conditions should be calmly met and manipulated. Change and delays are prosaged. A child born on this day may be active and resourceful, qualities needful to assist it to avoid unrest and tumult. It should also have economy and thrift instilled.

Waste neither time nor money, but make the best use of both. —Benjamin Franklin.

SHAVING BRUSHES
SOURCE OF DANGER

By Royal S. Copeland, M. D.

United States Senator from New York, Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

There are many ways to die, and man is not given his choice among them. He must accept his fate no matter what form it takes. Because there is no dodging that fate, however, it does not follow that "what is to be, will be." Such fatalistic philosophies have brought many to an untimely and unnecessary end.

DR. COPELAND

The span of life is gradually being widened and premature mortality lessened. The scientists are showing us more and more how to live; how to prevent infection; how to escape disease. One important factor that is adding to the sum total of America's unprecedented prosperity today, is the greatly lessened loss of productive time of the worker through illness, which his better knowledge of bodily hygiene has taught him.

But we still have much to learn. We still do many hazardous things because we are ignorant of the facts that they are hazardous. Because the day-by-day news reveals little of the many lives that pay for that ignorance, we unconsciously indulge in these practices, little dreaming how they are fraught with danger to our precious bodies and lives.

Take the matter of the common lather brush for example. For years scientists have warned against its use. Its thickly tufted knot offers an ideal breeding ground for germs. The barber shop is not the only place where this germ carrier exposes you to danger. Your own brush, by reason of its exposure to dust and dirt, is a potential disease carrier. Barber's itch and other serious skin and blood diseases are traced directly to germs that propagate in shaving brushes.

The deadliest of diseases communicable by the shaving brush is anthrax. Too often it is a fatal disease, yet always preventable.

Pastidious as we are in this modern day, isn't it rather remarkable that we submit to the common shaving brush and mug? While it may well be that comparatively few cases of disease are transmitted in this manner it cannot be denied that it is an act which gives abundant opportunity for trouble.

Even though ors and mugs are actually boiled for each customer—a thing that is rarely done, even in the best of shops—that is not enough to overcome the objection to their use. Nobody would accept a common toothbrush, no matter if it had been boiled for an hour. Why then, should he submit to the common shaving brush?

Not because of the remote danger of getting anthrax, not because of the prospect of catching barber's itch or some other skin or blood disease, not alone because of the possibility of physical contamination, do I plead for a change in the manner of soaping the face for shaving. I do it because there is a more sanitary, a more cleanly, a more decent process of lathering.

RED CROSS AIDS PHILIPPINES BY NIGHT ON FEVER

Tropical Diseases Soon To Be Conquered In Desolate Areas

Washington, Aug. 28.—The Red Cross is winning its fight against tropical diseases in the desolate and backward regions of the Philippines. Reports from the nurses and doctors engaged in the work read like tales from a hair-raising movie. The story is not unlike the battle of the yellow fever menace in the United States. The Red Cross is working on horseback or by foot through the mountains and through the jungles in long steamers from Manila to the outlying islands. Sometimes the nurses and doctors are attacked by the very diseases they are fighting. At times men and women are killed by the very diseases they are fighting. # Hold Those Jokes About Red Hair, Specialist's Plea

Cambridge, Eng., Aug. 28.—Don't gibe at red hair; the joke is likely to have a serious effect on the outlook on life of the owner of the hair, especially if he is a boy. This warning was uttered by Dr. H. Chichester-Miller, well-known English nerve specialist, in an address here. "All those who have ordinary colored hair," Dr. Miller said, "think red hair a joke, and the owners when they reach mature age often think the same. But their experience in earlier years," he added, "when their entry into a school room or passage down a street was the signal for a jest, has twisted their whole attitude toward the human herd. It is thought, reveals and wild people have red hair, but the fact is it leads to an attitude of aggressive self-defense."

47 Nations Joining To Finish Work On Large World Atlas

London, Aug. 28.—A world atlas, with each nation's contributions of maps, drawn to exactly the same scale and on the same lines, comprising about 1,920 sheets to cover all the land on the globe, is in process of formation. Delegates appointed by 47 governments attended a great International Geographical Congress at Cambridge to report on the progress of the map.

The work, though first conceived in 1891 and begun in 1909, will not be finished for many years. Indeed some countries, including America and Australia have hardly made a beginning. Brazil, on the other hand, a country with vast tracts, of unsurveyed land, has sent in more sheets than any other nation. More than 200 maps have been drawn up so far, the uniform size for each sheet being six degrees longitude and four degrees latitude. The completed maps are done in layer tint, the contours being shown by various colors from green at sea level to dark brown at 3,000 meters above the sea.

Towns, high houses, six types of roads, tracks, streams and railways are all marked in a uniform manner in every country. A feature of this exactitude is the necessity of many sheets with a tiny corner of land in a vast sea.

The maps of Britain and France are complete. The mainland of Europe was drawn up by the Royal Geographical society to this scale in time for the great war. It was published by the general staff and formed the basis laid down at the peace conference.

No Taxes Needed In Village Last Year

Armagh, Pa., Aug. 28.—This little village of some 110 inhabitants is a tax collector's paradise—little or no work, but the salary goes on. In a recent survey conducted by the department of internal affairs it was disclosed that no taxes were collected or needed here in 1927. According to Tax Collector Martha E. Tomb, a five-mill tax was collected in 1926 on taxable property assessed at $81,085, netting $394.13. This was not only sufficient for the needs of the village in that year, but created a surplus large enough to make taxes needless for 1927.

CROWD FORCES SMITH TO TALK

Lifted From Car, Pushed To Newark Hall Steps, He Gives Speech

New York, Aug. 28. — Gov. Al Smith was resting at his hotel here today after one of the most grueling experiences of his long political career.

Returning late last night from a week end in New Jersey, the Democratic presidential candidate was literally dragged from his automobile by a crowd of 10,000 cheering men and women in Newark, pushed half way up the city hall steps and then virtually forced to make the first public speech of his campaign.

After half a dozen of New Jersey's stalwart state troopers aided by a score of city policemen had fought a losing battle with the crowd which swooped down on Smith's machine, the candidate was lifted out of the car, and before he knew it, was on the city hall steps in the midst of a crowd of men and women who were screaming: "Al Smith, our next president."

The governor hadn't planned to open his active campaign for the White House until some time after Labor day but his Newark admirers took things in their own hands and there was nothing else he could do. Smith's speech on the steps of the Newark city hall was not long, but it was a campaign speech just the same.

RASKOB

in the Republican column were dismissed by Raskob without serious discussion.

Gov. Smith will make at least one speech in St. Louis, probably about mid-October. Raskob assured Senator Harry B. Hawes, Jr., of the St. Louis regional headquarters, sitting in with the national chairman and leaders from 10 nearby states were Senator Peter G. Gerry of Rhode Island, chairman of the national advisory committee; Senator Hawes, Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, former governor of Wyoming and vice chairman of the national committee, and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, chairman of the women's advisory committee.

Predicts Large Vote
"Never has the outlook for the Democratic party been better," Raskob said after preliminary conferences with leaders for this debatable agriculture section. "I prophesy that Smith and Robinson will poll the greatest popular vote in the history of our country."

Here are the states, claimed by Raskob today:

Alabama 12; Arizona 3; Arkansas 9; Colorado 6; Florida 6; Georgia 14; Kentucky 13; Louisiana 10; Maryland 8; Massachusetts 18; Minnesota 12; Mississippi 10; Missouri 18; Montana 4; Nebraska 8; New Jersey 14; New Mexico 3; New York 45; Nevada 3; North Carolina 12; Oklahoma 10; Rhode Island 5; South Carolina 9; Tennessee 12; Texas 20; Virginia 12; Wisconsin 13. Total 309.

Farm Revolt Held Serious
Although Raskob claimed all of the above states should the election be held now, reports presented by national committeemen from some of the middle western states made it clear that most, if not all of the agricultural region is battle ground for the Democrats. Raskob believes, however, that the "farm revolt" is of far greater proportions than most observers realize. This is the impression received, he said, from his talks with leaders from Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa, the Dakotas, Montana and Kansas.

There is great unrest and dissatisfaction throughout the farm belt because of the unkept promises made by the Republican party in 1920 and 1924. He said, "Big business and our best economists appreciate the fact that continued prosperity in our country is absolutely dependent upon increasing the purchasing power of the farmers. The Republicans have failed to appreciate this with the result that the small business man dependent upon him has suffered unnecessarily. Gov. Smith has a record of never having broken a promise."

Center On Farm Relief
The campaign in the Middle West is to be centered on Gov. Smith's acceptance speech promise of adequate farm relief through government aid in controlling the surplus crops, but no specific plan will be ready to offer during the campaign. This was made certain by Raskob's announcement that Prof. Edwin E. A. Seligman, of Columbia university, who has been selected to study the problem and submit recommendations for the national committee, will not be able to complete his report before election day.

Prohibition will be a secondary issue in the grain belt, not because the Democratic managers fear the issue in this region, Raskob said, but because the rural sections, according to his reports, are more vitally interested in the question of agricultural relief.

Religion, his reports here convince him is not an issue in any of the middle western states. The reaction to the attack of Rev. John Roach Stricker in New York, he asserted, had "taken bigotry out of the campaign for good."

MANY ENTOMBED

The building was on a principal business corner here. There were a dozen persons employed in the bank and as the crash occurred during a rush morning business hour, it was believed that at least that many others were in the building.

It was believed that it would be hours before rescue crews could bring out the bodies of all the persons either dead or trapped under the piles of debris, and the extent of the death toll definitely ascertained.

Cause Undetermined
The cause of the collapse could not be determined. It occurred shortly after 10 o'clock, when a number of persons were known to have been in the bank in addition to the officials and employees. All were caught in the deluge of stone and timber.

A grocery and a tailor shop were located in the bank building and persons in these places were either killed or injured. Persons on the street in front of the building were thought to have been buried in the fall.

tary of state head of the American delegation to the 1921 arms conference, tried to bring France and Britain together.

On the other hand, there is a feeling among officials and diplomats who question this view, that restoration of the entente cordiale of France, England and Russia of 1914, with Russia left out by force of circumstances in 1923, actually endangers the peace of the world because in the end another alliance would spring into being among other powers, just as before the war the triple alliance of Germany, Austria and Italy existed. In that case the triple alliance among these powers was the excuse for the creation of the triple entente.

One of the interesting sidelights reported yesterday was the "heel cooling" of John Phillip Sousa and his band members outside the gates of the fair grounds, because they were without tickets or proper credentials and unrecognized by hard-boiled gatekeepers.

When asked for his pass, Sousa is reported to have answered, "My face is usually my pass," but it didn't register with the gate-keepers, and the famous band master and composer was forced to wait until Ralph Combs, state fair press agent, arrived and made introductions.

CHECK TOLL OF LIVES IN FLOOD

New York Cloudburst has Caused Million Dollars
Damage to Property

Ellenville, N. Y., Aug. 28.—With property damage as the result of the cloudburst in the Roundout valley exceeding $1,000,000, state and local police today are attempting to check definitely the number of lives lost in the flood waters. Three bodies have been recovered, but it is feared that the death list may be increased. The waters in the 16-mile stretch of Roundout valley have receded and residents are returning to their water-soaked homes. Many homeless are being cared for by neighbors.

The raging torrent of Roundout creek washed out 30 bridges. It is estimated, and telegraph and telephone wires in the vicinity are down and water systems paralyzed. A section of the New York, Ontario and Western railroad tracks were washed out at Wawarsing and paved highways throughout Ulster and Sullivan counties, the scene of the cloudburst, were badly damaged. Along the roads many automobiles were found deserted by their occupants who had sought safety on higher ground from the rapidly rising waters.

The three known dead are Charles Lavery, 50, of Paterson, N. J.; Phillip Hatt of Lackawack and Frank Weller of Grahamsville.

Of the 16 towns in the flood area greatest damage was done in Nanpach, Ellenville and Rosendale.

"DON'T MARRY"

"Don't Marry," at the State tonight, is the story of Priscilla Bowen (Lois Moran), who is a very modern young miss living with her staid aunt, a puritanical spinster. Quite unexpectedly Priscilla falls in love with Henry Willoughby, a puritanical bachelor, who believes modern women are a sin and abomination. He will have nothing to do with Priscilla so she decides to pose as her own cousin.

The deception works completely and their engagement is announced. Then Priscilla is remorseful over the methods she used.

With Henry's father she plans to have the two families spend a vacation at a fashionable summer resort where he will see the ridicule his blushing fiancée evokes.

While at the resort Priscilla contrives to make herself as ridiculous as possible and then change quickly into her modern self as the cousin Henry, in a daze, finds himself falling in love with whom he supposes is the cousin of his fiancée.

Rather than hurt his old fashioned sweetheart, however, Henry takes on the air of a martyr, marries her, and the big punch of the picture comes in a comical twist that proves a big surprise.

"THE GARDEN OF EDEN"

"The Garden of Eden" which is at the Grand has a touch of symbolism, as the title would indicate, but essentially it is a thoroughly modern tale involving the difficulties of Toni Lebrun, little entertainer at a Budapest cabaret. Almost all of the action takes place in Budapest.

apest or Monte Carlo, and it is from the Garden of the Hotel Eden in the world-famous gambling capital that the production gets its name. Toni (Miss Griffith) has gone to Monte Carlo following the collapse of her job in Budapest, and she is posing as the daughter of the indigent Baroness Rosa. She becomes engaged to the rich young Richard Spanly, but the course of true love proves about as smooth-running as a flat tire, partly because of Richard's own inability to declare himself and partly through the snobishness of his aunts and uncles. Things finally reach such a pass that just before the wedding, which is a blue-ribbon social event, Toni is forced by her pride and other circumstances to reveal her real identity. Richard's inability to adjust himself to the changed conditions and the supercilious smugness of the assembled relatives are too much for the independent child of the stage, and she upbraids them all, at the same time stripping off the laces, the jewels, the gloves and even the wedding gown which Richard has contributed to the occasion. Clad only in her underwear (which is all she had on that belonged to her) Toni stalks haughtily from the room, just as the orchestra strikes up the wedding march, and flies down the grand stairway among the horrified guests.

Cupid Snarles Her

Mary Garden, prima donna and stormy petrel of American opera, who, reports from abroad say, will trip to the altar with Pierre Plessis, French newspaper publisher. Recently Miss Garden underwent a "face-lifting" operation in Paris, but it was performed in her own hotel suite to dodge unwelcome publicity.

London—Popularity of the phonograph and changes in fashion are blamed for a decline in British imports of musical instruments this year, the decrease being especially noticeable in pianos and organs. More musical instruments of other types were imported, but the value was less than usual.

THE HOME KITCHEN

Some Simple Dinner Menus

Simple dinner menus for small families where there is none but part time help employed are handy to have at hand. Time for cooking and seasonable viands must enter into our plans as well as forethought that means economy in selection. Try the following and see if they are not budget builders rather than time diminishers:

First Menu

Onion Soup
Breaded Chops Tomato Sauce
Escalloped Potatoes Baked Squash
Lettuce Salad, Roquefort Dressing
Baked Apple and Cream

Second Menu

Fruit Cocktail
Boiled Beef, Horseradish Sauce
Baked Potatoes, Macaroni au Gratin
Lettuce and Chives
French Dressing

Brown Betty Pudding

The onion soup in the first menu is made in the usual way; that is pare and chop eight good-sized yellow onions coarsely with two stalks of celery and a few sprays of parsley. Put in a saucepan and cover with water or light chicken broth or white stock. Cook until the onions are done, season with salt, pepper, a little sugar and a teaspoonful of butter, then put through a puree sieve. Heat a cupful and a half of rich milk, add to the soup, then thicken with white roux.

Buy large shoulder chops and with a sharp knife remove the bones before dipping them into beaten egg, then into fine seasoned crumbs, the chops may be fried or cooked in the oven. For the sauce open a large can of tomatoes and drain off the juice for the sauce. Put the solid part in the lexbox for next day's stewing. The rest of the menu is easily made.

For the next menu use fruit in season for the cocktail, and it takes very little. Select a four-pound piece of tender bottom round and bell a little onion, celery, parsley, a half bayleaf, three whole cloves and a pepper with it for flavoring, and a quarter cupful of vinegar to the water. When done lift the meat, boil down the broth rapidly to about half, add pepper, salt, a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, thicken to consistency of cold honey, strain, then add a few raisins that have been plumped in boiling water for a few minutes.

The English way of making the horseradish sauce is to put two tablespoonful of grated horseradish into a small saucepan with a teaspoonful of sugar, a little pepper and salt, a saltspoonful of mustard, a tablespoonful of white wine vinegar, then stir in gradually a gill of thick cream, barely warm as they are blending, then set aside and serve cold.

Third menu

Oysters on the Half Shell
Fried Filled of Sole, Tartar Sauce
Baked Potatoes Stewed Tomatoes
Shrimp Salad
Lemon Pie

Allow six oysters to a portion, with or without cocktail sauce. A pound and a half of the fish will be sufficient for serving four people; two pounds if they are hearty eaters. One can of shrimp makes the salad, with a cupful of chopped celery, a chopped cucumber, a cupful of finely cut up lettuce, Sprinkle the salad with a little French dressing and mix well, then add a little mayonnaise and serve in lettuce leaves. Garnish with minced peppers or sliced stuffed olives. If the lemon pie is too much trouble a fruit pie may be used, but no dessert requiring cream should be served with a fish dinner.

Four chops broiled, serve four people amply with the vegetables, the boiled beef may be sliced and warmed in the gravy for the next day's luncheon.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

She Describes a Summer Afternoon Dress

MADAME was out of the shop all afternoon the other day and I officiated as Joe Sales lady, and if there's anything I love it's to sell dresses and prance around and act as though I owned the place. Helene gets simply poisonous with jealousy when I'm put in charge and that, of course, makes it even more delightful.

And I did well, too—only one customer left the shop without purchasing something during the entire afternoon, and that was Mrs. Cordice, and it's a miracle when she buys anything. Whereupon, I pandered myself several bouquets—and had the wind completely taken out of my sails when Madame returned and was simply furious because I hadn't shown Mrs. Cordice the pink satin that was ordered for her. How did I know, not being psychic, that that terrible pink satin was her choice?—although I might have suspected it.

At any rate, I sold a model that's been a bit of a worry to us. It's a lovely dress, but it blows in chiffon, and tall slender customers who could carry it have wanted something more snugly fitted—and the stout ones looked just too awful in it. But kind Providence provided a customer, tall and sylph-like, who was on the hunt for a dainty dress to wear at a garden party or a strawberry festival or some such outdoor business, and who was entranced with it. It had full bishop sleeves to which was attached a cape effect. I forgot to mention that it was made of lavender chiffon that was edged similarly—as were the skirt and the edges. A sash drape, terminating in a large bow at the left side completed it.

SCIENTIST MAY SOLVE MYSTERY OF PLANTS' SEX

Breeds Two Species And Produces Hybrid Offspring In Gotham

Washington, Aug. 22.—Science has made a notable advance in solving the sex mystery of plants, according to an announcement by Dr. Bernard O. Dodge, a plant pathologist at the New York Botanical garden.

Dodge has succeeded in producing a fertile hybrid between two species of the same genus of red mold fungi. This accomplishment, new to science, was declared to have an important application to the study of plant diseases, which are causing heavy loss to agriculture.

The scientist actually was able to breed two different species and produce a hybrid offspring which in turn could reproduce.

Scientists had previously known that fungi, those strange forms of low plant life which have no roots or seeds, and draw their substance from decaying organic matter or parasitically from the animal or plant or which they live, had sex.

Plant Fertilizing
By self-fertilization and back-crossing Dr. Dodge formerly of the U. S. department of agriculture, has been able to select out forms which do not differ materially from the parent forms, showing that these fungi behave in crossing in a way which accords with the Mendelian principles.

"If the two bread molds with which Dr. Dodge worked, can produce other types differing from them and able to produce offsprings like themselves then the obvious deduction is that other fungi may do the same thing, particularly crosses between varieties," said a statement on the experiments.

"This throws new light on the plant disease problem but also complicates it. For example, wheat rust, the scourge of the American prairies is a fungus which sucks the life blood from the grain, leaving only the bare stalks. But government pathologists have warred steadily against it and have lately produced rust-resistant strains of wheat which flourish fairly well, even though it may be exposed to the danger of the particular rust which federal scientists have studied."

Dodge pointed out that if fungi species can propagate and produce fertile hybrids, differing from the parent organisms this means new enemies may constantly be arising against which the rust-resistant wheat may not be effective.

May Help Future
Although it increases the problems of plant pathologists, Dodge believes that it will help them in the long run, for now they will be able to explain the existence of many new varieties of fungi for whose origin no other explanation could otherwise be given.

Dodge's discovery applies not only to wheat rust, but to all other obnoxious fungi that injure fruit, vegetables, trees, shrubs and flowers.

So far the pathologist has been able to produce fertile hybrids from but one combination of species—the red bread molds—but he is constantly experimenting with other and hopes to obtain new crosses.
